

Meet Your Pulmonologist

Salman Q. Sheikh, MD, FACP, FCCP, FAASM, DABSM

I listen to the patient. The patient comes first and is my priority. I try to give the best and thorough service for that patient.

Why I chose Health Care

"I chose to become a doctor when I was in high school. As I am from a third world nation, there were many poverty stricken communities around my school. Poverty and poor health were the main issues of the country. I was deeply touched by these communities. I told my father that I wanted to do something for these people and he suggested that medicine would be a good place to start. So I began my journey to become the Medicine Man. During this journey, I spent time in England and western Alabama for 4 years in the health professional shortage area in the US. I am very passionate about the patients that I care for and I know that if I listen carefully, half of their concerns would be laid to rest."
